

One sunny day there was a window and all the children were looking out of it. They could see a rainbow and under the rainbow was a magical unicorn and it was dancing!

Their eyes widened in amazement. Cautiously, they tip-toed outside. The children had never seen a magical unicorn before, so they felt excited.

The magical unicorn looked amazing. It had a shiny pink body with a sparkly blue horn and golden eyes that twinkled like stars in the night sky. Suddenly, the magical unicorn began to speak.

"I have lost my glorious, glamorous, glistening wings!" mumbled the magical unicorn looking very disheartened. As she was searching through the muddy forest grounds she heard an eerie echo which made her shudder with fear.

The magical unicorn climbed up a tree and hid behind some leaves and branches. She peered at the forest beneath her. When she glared around the forest, she heard the sound again. Her eyes glistened as she stared at the shadowy figure standing in the distance.

When the shadow came closer, the beautiful unicorn looked down in disbelief. It was the cheerful children that she had seen before!

'Please can you help me to get down. I have lost my glamorous wings and so I can't fly'.

As quick as a flash, the children exclaimed 'Of course, we will, let's find those glamorous wings', as they scattered around the forest grounds. The overgrown, tall trees made it difficult for the children to manoeuvre and search for the shimmering, delicate wings. Eagerly, the children looked in every nook and cranny trying to find the magical unicorn's lost wings.

As they were carefully searching through the thick, dense forest, the children spotted something glistening in the distance on the branch of a Hazel tree. Dashing desperately towards it, so that they could help their magical friend, the cheerful children tried to receive the glistening object.

However, to their disappointment, it was only a drop of tree sap, that sparkled due to the rays of the glorious sun.

"Please be quick!" the unicorn exclaimed as it was clutching onto the branch, "My hooves weren't invented for trees and this woodpecker doesn't look very happy that I'm in his territory!"

Panicked, the children scattered themselves through the forest in a desperate search for the wings, before the unicorn fell out of the tree (which would be awfully horrendous)!

"Hey everyone," shouted Billy, pointing in excitement, "Look what's behind that Elder tree (the superior tree)!"

Glistening like a shimmering, shooting star in the night sky, something was glowing behind the Elder tree. Something was drawing everyone's attention towards the Elder tree and that something needed to be investigated further...

Like a stealthy - yet cautious - ninja, Billy approached the Elder tree with equal uneasiness and excitement. With each step, Billy's heart rate increased further yet his face beamed with an ever-widening smile.

Just as Billy reached the tree and stretched out to touch the radiant, effervescent light...

WHOOOOOOOOOOOSSSSSSHHHHHHHHH!!!!

Soaring upwards like a scintillating supernova and charging through the canopy of the forest, the glistening wings flew up proudly and sparkled in an array of luminous, rainbow colours.

Mesmerised, the children gawped at the sight before them.

Magically, the wings floated towards the tearful, joyful Unicorn. Tears of joy streamed down her face, as the amazing wings sat peacefully upon her back and made her feel complete once again.

"I'm so happy for the Unicorn", cried Aaisha as she hugged Sara as they watched the Unicorn fly off into the scenic, stunning sunset.

The End
